WAR AND BASEBALL

Several weeks ago it was predicted in this column that war between Italy and Ethiopia was inevitable. Events have since been moving very rapidly to make the prediction come true, the first martial act taking place yesterday. What that act will be the forerunner of, not even Statesmen can tell.

THE POSSIBILITIES

It is not beyond the possibilities that the great powers of Europe will be dragged in before the conflict has proceeded very far and such a conflagration may ultimately, despite all precautions, drag in the United States. I have before remarked that events are more potent than predictions. We found ourselves in the World War without the desire to be embroiled, regardless of our policy of splendid isolation.

Personally I am strong for that policy and if it is possible to adhere to it we will avoid the shedding of blood and the expenditure of much treasure. On the surface there seems no good reason for us becoming entangled and it is my hope and prayer that we will not.

MORE PREDICTIONS

Although I find no pleasure or pride in having made a true prediction about the war, it is possible to adventure into another field of conjecture right now, that regardless of results, will have no serious consequences.

The World Series is again in our midst and during the period of the broadcasting of the first game yesterday the troubles of

Deputy sheriffs in Contra Costa county in the Moraga area were told to keep an eye open. MYSTERY FILM WILL BE SEEN AT LOCAL FOX

"Thunder In The Night" starring Edmund Lowe, Raquel Morley and Paul Cavanagh, plus "After The Dance" co-starring James Cagney and George Murphy, are the two big feature attractions coming to the Fox theater tomorrow.

With "Thunder In The Night" all the action of "Thunder In The Night" occurs in the course of a stormy night. Edmund Lowe's adventures start on a fast pace while he investigates the murder of a mysterious guest of a hotel. With amazing speed and no end of suspense, Lowe reconstructs the fact scene while the thunder peals outside. Then in a stunning climax he uncovers the real murderer.

A new kind of musical picture is seen in "After The Dance" Murphy, who scored a personal triumph in the New York stage show of "After The Dance" is the first time on the screen in this film. Murphy's dancing is a real thing to see. "After The Dance" is the first film to present him as a dancer and dancer.

"Accent On Youth" with Sylvia Sydney and Robert Marshall, "The Known Woman" with Marion Marsh and Richard Cromwell and the complete Raquel and Lowe fight picture are the triple film entertainment playing at the Fox theater for the last time today.

Shoots The Works

IN ADDITION to his hobby of building automobiles, H. J. Klager, president and general manager for the Pontiac company, shows he can handle a gun at a shooting gallery.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(Ex-Press) Herbert Hoover has not yet decided whether he will accept the nomination for president in 1936, but he is known to be more than ready to accept the nomination if it comes.

More than a decade ago, Hoover's firm was given an order by the then emperor of Ethiopia to make a survey of the country's mineral wealth.

The company's engineers spent three years in the work. Finally, they reported that the country was rich in minerals. The country was found to be rich in minerals. The country was found to be rich in minerals.

Speaking to a friend the other day in Palo Alto, Mr. Hoover said, "I don't think I will take Ethiopia on my list, but he will be vastly disappointed."

SERIOUS WORTH

Serious business did not occupy all the time of the Republican Executive Committee at last week's meeting.

The G. O. P. chiefs did a lot of reminiscing. One of the most humorous incidents recalled was the way in which the late Jim Hume, Pennsylvania leader, stopped George B. Keim of New Jersey, from reading a long, dreary document at the 1932 convention.

As secretary of the National committee it was Keim's duty to read the formal Call convening the nominating convention. The Call is a lengthy paper, plain, the States, the number of delegates and other official information. Usual procedure is to read only the first and last paragraphs.

But this was Keim's first performance. And with a national radio hookup he proposed making the most of his opportunity.

While the sweeteners, delegates fidgeted and twisted in their seats he read on and on. Finally, it became too much for him.

He leaped from his chair, rushed over to the podium and held it steady up a lively time. Then, before the startled Keim knew what was happening, Burke grabbed the Call from his hands, ran a pencil thru all but the last paragraph and handed it back to him.

He said: "You've had your electricity, George. Shut off with those lines."

COAL POLITICS

It was the hand of Jim Farley, whose eyes are fixed hard to the 1936 campaign, that really pulled the five-man Food to Secretary Guffey's "Mills Of The Gods" soft coal act.

Roosevelt first called for Secretary Perkins and then for Secretary Guffey. Each submitted their own bill of coal politics.

But when it came to a showdown, these names were dropped. Big Jim's recommendations carried the day.

One significant Farley nomination was George E. Aker, a California attorney. The Pacific Coast State produces no coal, and Aker knows little about the industry. But he is a lieutenant of the KKK, and generalissimo of the KKK faction, with whom Jim recently made peace.

Politics also ruled in the selection of Walter H. McDougall, a rising member of Boss Tom Pendergast's all-powerful Kansas City machine. Pendergast was anti-Roosevelt in the 1932 convention. It is safe to bet that the chunky little politician will be on the bandwagon in 1936.

Of the other three coal members, C. E. Smith of Kentucky, W. Va., was picked by Senator Neely; Charles F. Bostford of Pittsburgh by Senator Joe Gurnea; and Percy Tettlow of Cleveland by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The Louis Baez fight turned New York into a California mining town of the old gold rush days.

It was carnival time all over Manhattan, with the largest and most spectacular sporting crowd in more than a decade. The men descended from all over the country by every possible means of transportation, and for once the native New Yorkers didn't try to assert their place in the scheme of things.

Times Square and Broadway were the center of most of the activity. Most of the downtown hotels were SRO signs out long before the fight started. People who came late and could find no accommodations had to sleep in the automobiles parked on the streets.

On some blocks the line-up of cars against the curb showed not a single New York license plate. Virtually every other State in the Union was represented. The line-up of automobiles was so thick that it was impossible to get through. People were turned away from the fight, and many were turned away from the fight, and many were turned away from the fight.

The night clubs and entertainment spots, haven't seen so much free dough in years. Fight tickets went for as high as $125, and the sporting crowd, flung all of large denominations, was out to spend as much of it as possible down in the Roaring Forties, in happy Harlem and round about and in between. Up in Harlem, in fact, Louis's fans started celebrating his victory before the fight began, and safety in the famous dusky room made a New Year's Eve look like an old maid's tea party.

The Depression, as well as Maxie Bear, took a terrific beating.

by MILDRED SNOW GLEASON

On his deathbed, Dr. Alexander Dane gives his stepdaughter, Peggy Terry, a mysterious paper to be delivered in person to a John Paylor in Aswan, Egypt. When she and her mother sail from New York, Terry Brown, wealthy young sportsman, sails with them. Three fellow passengers—James Towland, Mrs. Norma Hilling, and Mrs. Pohnson who has made their suspicions and by the time they reach Alexandria, Peggy and Terry are convinced that the three are after the mysterious paper. Meanwhile, Peggy and Terry become engaged. From Alexandria, they proceed to Aswan. Mrs. Pohnson and Mrs. Hilling tag along, but Terry remains in Alexandria.

CHAPTER XV
ASWAN. Engineers in riding boots and sun helmets. Fat tourists perched on the backs of miniature donkeys. Thin tourists with their legs dangling over the sides of the miniature beasts. Natives also astride donkeys, without saddles, sitting back almost on the end of the animals' spines.

Aswan. Yellow streets and dry air. A luxurious modern hotel overlooking the Nile and the island of Elephantine with its groups of palms and across the Nile, the golden sand of the desert, bright in the sun.

Peggy and Terry and Mrs. Dane lunched on the terrace of the hotel, but Peggy was hardly conscious of the food she ate, so impatient she was to get started on the mission which had brought her there. Terry, however, curbed her impatience.

"No good making inquiries at this hour," he said firmly.

"Yes," Terry drawled, "that's the one."

The manager shook his head. "He cleared out about two years ago. Don't know where he went. Wasn't the kind to book through us."

Terry took a long puff on his cigarette and shrugged.

"Thought it was rather far-fetched, expecting him still to be here. Tell me, is there anything going on that we might like to see?"

The usual donkey and camel race.

"When does the next boat leave Shella?" Terry asked.

"Wednesday. I've got a good dragoonman, guaranteed not to cheat, and speaks five languages."

"Sure—I know," Terry grinned. "But I'm dragoonman on this trip."

The manager seemed to think this was a good joke and laughed heartily. Peggy waited impatiently for Terry to decide to leave. When they were finally outside again, he said:

"Couldn't be too abrupt, you know. Don't want everyone in Aswan to know we're here just to locate Paylor."

Peggy nodded. "I caught the idea," she sighed, "but what are we going to do now?"

"Push on to Balla on Wednesday," Terry answered cheerfully. "I saw the fellow there only a few months ago. We may be able to pick up the trail from there if he's gone on somewhere else."

Terry helped Peggy out of the saddle, and they entered a dark,

GRANT PTA PLANS FOR MANY EVENTS

Grant P. T. A. met yesterday afternoon in regular business meeting with Mrs. W. E. Sims presiding.

Discussion largely concerned ways and means of furthering the year's project of equipping a hospital room. Mrs. Herbert Blake, health chairman, reported that Dr. C. R. Blake, city health commissioner, had offered co-operation in securing services of local physicians for a well baby clinic. Mrs. Blake was asked to write a letter to Superintendent of Schools W. T. Helms asking his permission to resume the clinic which proved so successful last year.

Over 28 Grant school mothers took advantage of the pre-school clinic last year.

Mrs. Blake stated that baby scales at a cost of $20 and a hospital cot were needed for the room.

The first project for raising funds will be a turkey whist and bridge to be held October 23 at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. There will be a $250 turkey order for every three tables.

Mrs. T. A. Brown was named auditor of the PTA to take the place of Mrs. H. E. Cecil who has left town.

Plans were made for the presentation of a Punch and Judy show to be held some time in the near future.

New Deal Rapped By GOP Woman Leader At Dinner Meet Here

Along with this, the speaker, a woman, came the alphabetical mixup, the NRA and many other similar laws, but we should be thankful that we still have a Supreme Court, as a bulwark against the enforcement of the many unconstitutional laws that were enacted. After this decision of the high court, then came the talk that laws should be passed, whether constitutional or not, and that the constitution should be placed in the discard as it belonged to the "horse and buggy days."

The speaker did not object to a change of the constitution, if it is necessary. Provisions are made for making needed changes, but they should be made in an orderly manner and by the vote of the people, and not by brain trusters.

"The so-called New Deal is not a New Deal but an old deal. All of these theories have been tried in the past and discarded. What we want, and must insist on, is a government maintained by a government of laws of the people and not a government by bureaucracy. We should continue to live under a constitutional government, and not be idly by and permit the constitution to be undermined by insidious efforts."

Letters of regret were received from Congressmen Albert F. Carter, who was unable to attend because of the illness of his wife, but extending greetings to the gathering; from State Senator Will R. Sharkey and Miss Helen McGregor, secretary for State chairman Earl Warren who appeared for that official because of his absence at a meeting at Santa Cruz.

Supervisor J. N. Long extended greetings on behalf of the board of supervisors, acting for Chairman W. J. Buchanan and Assemblyman T. H. Delap also made a short talk.

KASCH SPEAKS
Mrs. L. P. Boyce of San Francisco, president of the Northern California division Republican Women, was introduced and in a few words told of the work that was being done in this section of the State.

J. A. Kasch, chairman of the Republican county central committee, told of what the Republicans of the county were planning for the coming year, and the organization work that was now being carried on in connection with the State and congressional committees.

ERA OF EXTRAVAGANCE
Then came the speaker of the evening, Mrs. Charles F. Van de Water and she held the attention of the large crowd during an extended address. She told of the era of extravagance that had been put into effect during the present administration, and quoted figures showing that since 1933 as much money had been spent by the 'New Dealers' as had been spent during the entire history of the country from the time that Washington took office down to the inception of the World War. After the World War the national debt was $26,000,000,000 and during the Harding and Coolidge administrations it had been reduced to $17,000,000,000, and now the Democrats have increased it by $11,000,000,000, making the present debt $31,000,000,000.

PROMISES BROKEN
"When President Roosevelt went into office," the speaker said, "the people of the country were behind him and the Republicans refrained from criticism. The administration was elected upon a certain platform, but not one of the promises has been kept, but instead the platform of the Socialist candidate, Norman Thomas, has been adopted and carried out. Then came the era of wild extravagance, and where it will stop no one knows, but the fact remains, according to their own figures that there are as many

The highlight of the entertainment will be the appearance of the Harrod Singers, entertainers of Washington, D. C.

Following lunch, Dr. Heady will introduce the other speakers, beginning with the Rev. J. B. Orr, followed by Ralph Pulcher, Townsend state area manager; Representative Albert Carter of the Sixth Congressional District; Sheridan Downey, author and speaker, and Representative John Tolan, of the seventh congressional district.

Other attractions include music by Cautlemont High School Band of 40 pieces and Arkansas Fiddlers.

A very short business meeting was held last evening by Tahoe Council after which the section was adjourned and all members went to Berkeley to attend a meeting of Mohawk Council.

Mrs. Marie Ceredono presided over the meeting of the group. The next meeting will be held in two weeks.

LINCOLN PTA WILL HOLD BUSY MEETING

The Body Louse Played an Important Part in History of War

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

THE body louse, like his cousin, the head louse, is no respecter of persons. During the World War he attacked himself to the General as well as the back private. The great difference was that the general could stay farther away from the creature's playground, and was best provided with facilities for bathing and changing his clothing.

The louse has been associated with man as long as history records the race, and the association has been close. The louse thrives best where men are housed closely together, as in army barracks, jails, prison camps and dark tenements.

During the late war, the trenches were hotbeds for them. In the trenches, the louse was as common as the rat. The louse is a pest of the soldier, and the necessity for the soldiers to live in the trenches without an opportunity to change their clothing for four or five days or a week was "pie" for the louse.

These recent years of depression have meant crowded housing to large numbers of people. As is the case with many of our parasites, the female is the active member of the family. She lives about a month and in that time may lay as many as three or four thousand eggs. She is small, about the size of a large pin head.

She assumes the color of her host. People of the black race are bitten by black lice, the yellow race has yellow lice, and the white race a dirty gray, so they are not easy to find.

Getting the Blood

The lice are equipped with a cutting proboscis, supplied with a suction tube by which means they make an opening in the skin, usually at a hair root or a sweat gland, till they reach a blood vessel and then they start sucking. After a full meal, the creature turns a red color, due to the distention of the abdomen and the thinness of its skin.

It thrives best at body temperature and is easily discouraged by cold. The usual heat of the body, and starves if deprived of food for a few days, but the eggs may lie dormant for some time. The louse is a very heavy feeder and frequently causes a red color due to the distention of the abdomen and the thinness of its skin.

In this way, as well as by the saliva that passes from its mouth while feeding, it is a very active carrier of disease. It is known positively to be the chief, if not the only, carrier of typhus fever from one person to another. Because of typhus fever, the louse has probably done much to make world history.

During the winter of 1914-15 a violent epidemic of typhus broke out in the Serbian Army. Thousands of new cases appeared every day and about 150,000 patients died. This condition delayed the Austrian attack on Serbia some eight months. The Turks were short of ammunition and because of the typhus epidemic, the Central Powers were delayed in supplying them, which probably did its share in effecting the final result. Thus the louse, by carrying the typhus, disrupted the plans of great nations.

Thrives on Dirt

The louse is accused of conveying many other diseases besides typhus, jail fever and relapsing fever, besides less serious skin diseases, are laid at his door. The louse thrives on poverty and dirt; perhaps that is the reason for the old saying, "Sue a beggar and get a louse."

Whenever men are congregated day and night in close quarters without facilities for bathing and changing clothing, the louse thrives. The louse has six legs, each supplied with a claw by which he attaches himself to the underclothing of his host, then proceeds to feed. When a louse victim takes off his underwear he frees himself of lice, but they are still in the clothing, ready to work at the first opportunity.

The louse and egg can be killed by subjecting the clothing to steam heat. Brushing the clothing does not remove them all. Turning out the seams and pockets of the clothing and running a very hot iron or steam from a tea kettle over them kills many. Frequent changes of clothing and hot baths are very discouraging to the louse.

In some way sulphur is very unpleasant for the louse. During the late war many soldiers wore a bag containing sulphur around their waists day and night. In Asia it is a common practice to remove the clothing and place them over an ant hill for several hours and they are soon free of lice. Sponging the clothing with coal oil or dipping in gasoline will kill both lice and eggs.

Six Piccinilli Are Acc Sculptors

By T. J. POT RAKE

ONE of the great mysteries of our time is who makes all the statues you see about in squares, buildings and any place else they can be set. The question is answered in part by naming the six Piccinilli Brothers, high-ranking sculptors and practical stoneworkers, for they have been responsible for many well-known pieces, both small and heroic. Now Radio City, which fared badly with some of its modernistic art, has turned to the same brothers. A new four-ton sculptural glass panel, near completion, was designed nominally by Attilio, the eldest brother, although it is safe to say they all took a hand in it.

The fact is, the brothers are like Benny's cats; you can't tell where one begins and another leaves off. They work long shifts, in their rambling studio on New York's Upper East Side, wearing old working clothes and square caps made of folded newspapers. Despite long shifts, however, they demand plenty of time to turn out a piece of work. They took ten years to make the great Maine Monument in Columbus Circle, New York.

They have sculptured the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, the Rockefeller Center in New York, but sent the boys back to Italy for their art education at the Academia San Lucia in Rome and Massa Carrara, whence comes the magnificent marble. When the brothers came home they set up their studio, and it became a going concern at once.

Among their turnout is Mac-

Monnie's much maligned "Civic virtue," but they insist it was just a chisel job to them, made from the MacMonnies' blue prints. It isn't their affair, they say, and keep out of arguments.

IN ORGANDIE

Organdie fashions both blouses illustrated above. The navy blue dotted model at top has a sectioned front, a small tailored collar and adds huge navy blue buttons. Blue is approved for the second type, which is fashioned with a ruffle rib arranged with a flat collar and button closing.

Guide to Charm

Bangs Make Best Effect For a Party

By JACQUELINE BUNT

BETTY confides that she has a new idea for a party. She says that if you have a party, you should have a bang.

The new rules apply to you as to the girl with straight hair. Only you will have to do more brushing, if anything, to keep your hair shiny and soft and manageable. If you have a recent permanent, you will have to take three or four hot oil shampoos to subdue the wayward links.

Bangs are always youthful and sweet, but if you do not care for them all the time, at least try them on party occasions when you wear your prettiest organdie gown and want to look fragile and feminine. Part your hair on the side or center where you like it best. The bangs should be long and softly curled, some of them high. Comb the hair back from the hairline in front in sleek, shallow waves and fasten with brilliant clips or tiny bows behind your ears. Brush the ends over your shoulders. If you have a permanent, you will have to make several rows of soft little curls across the back of your neck.

MISS BUNT

Straight, over-the-forehead bangs with a simple hair arrangement of shadow waves and flat sculptured curls, or turned down and curls, are demure and attractive. They also tend to conceal a high forehead and make your eyes look larger.

If you are young, with a petite figure, are boyish, or have features that seem a bit rugged, then have your hair cut rather short and wear it in tousled windblown curls all over your head. A curl or two can drop over your forehead if you look more debonair that way.

A surprising number of girls are charming with this coiffure and it is the easiest of all to take care of. Run a rather coarse comb through your curls, press them quickly in place with your two fingers and the job is done.

The girl with long curls who wants to keep them in long, dignified and stunning by fastening a band or ribbon or brilliant hair ornaments together once in the back and pinned in place, then the curls brought up to the crown of the head and fastened there with a fancy pin and the loose ends allowed to dance about as they will.

If you need a waviest to keep your hair the way you want it, get one that is non-drying. There is a new wave lotion of this kind that leaves the hair soft and manageable and gives it a lasting sheen. A very little of the preparation is rubbed between the hands and over the surface of your hair while it is still wet, then the waves pushed into place and the hair dried. Use a little more on the hair when you want to reset your wave.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "Can you suggest a good shade of powder for me? I have a medium fair complexion with brown eyes and hair. I tan easily, but try to avoid it as much as possible. I usually buy a 'chapel powder,' but lately it seems too light and shows up on my skin.—Joe."

Rachel powders usually come in two or three shades. Why not buy a Rachel No. 2 or No. 3 or a beige shade? Apparently, your skin has tanned slightly in spite of your attempt to keep it fair. My other suggestion is that you buy a box of suetan powder and mix a small amount of it with the Rachel that you have been using. A tinted foundation cream might enable you to use the same powder and will also help prevent tanning.

QUESTION: "Is there some place that I could go to learn how to choose the right cosmetics and how to apply them? My skin is in a very poor condition at present and I would like to improve it and at the same time look as well as possible.—Mrs. Y. F."

Many department stores at different times have demonstrations of popular brands of cosmetics. Usually these are announced by local papers. Many of the better salons will also analyze your skin free of charge and recommend the right corrective cosmetics as well as the right make-up for you. Follow the ad.

Fashion Flies High

Carole Lombard has decided that this type of tailored pajama is the ideal costume for air travel. Beige silk gabardine for the three pieces, which means trousers, blouse and sweater jacket. Pig skin belt and buttons, new woven leather shoes and a simple beret complete the costume.

Off-the-Face Silhouette Promises to Come Into Own

By IRENE VAIL

New York—The off-face silhouette has been adopted in a number of important French millinery collections, and promises to be a style which will become entrenched for the early autumn, at least. It is evidenced in its most dashing interpretation in the Agnes aureole hats, which are directly inspired by the Italian art exhibit in Paris. But many other ways of sponsoring forehead-revealing contours are noted. Molyneux, for example, adopts a profile line which allows the hair to fall over the forehead, and which, in fact, is a means of expressing the off-face line, being worn straight across the top of the forehead in several collections.

Two-piece knitted garments in similar styles have been seen several times, mostly in navy blue—similar to the jumper part is styled like many of the separate jumpers worn, with crew neck and ribbing at the waistline; usually these have short sleeves, and the skirts are as plain as possible. Aside from the relief jerseys used for the fancier suits mentioned in an earlier paragraph, machine knit stitches give prominence to the classic plain pattern with ribbing at neck, sleeves and waistline. Next come ribbed stichings, but these are more likely to be seen in hand-knit.

With all this importance given suits, it is natural that blouses should figure conspicuously in the sportswear picture. They are tucked-in, and as classic as the suits themselves in cut, with only slight variations in the neckline, as have been sketched. In fabrics, linens are frequently seen, also cottons in striped, checked and plaid patterns; mat synthetic jerseys plain or similarly patterned; occasionally sheer wools in small necktie designs; quite a number of crepe de Chine or foulard blouses dotted white or grege on navy or brown ground; and more rarely washable crepe in light color.

If hubby scoffs at the usual desserts as being too frilly and feminine, then when his turn comes, prepare his favorite steak or roast with vegetables and terminate the meal with unsalted crackers and a tangy cheese, such as Gorgonzola or Liederkraut. With them serve strong coffee. If his taste runs to blander things then arrange cream cheese, crisp salted crackers, and bright strawberry preserves or preserved figs on a divided relish dish, and see how he goes for them.

Sunday-Meal Plan Caters to the Family

By JUDITH WILSON

YOU can make your Sunday meal more enjoyable for your family if you follow the plan of one young homemaker I know. She makes it a point to serve the special favorites of her family on this one day, when meals can be more elaborate and leisurely.

Sunday dinner features the favorite dishes of one member of the family, and Daddy or Johnny or Sister feel free to invite one or more friends whenever a turn comes. Often these request menus are served over and over during the summer, since they are unusually attractive and can be made to serve eight persons nearly as easily as four.

SUNDAY DINNERS
Honeydew Melon with Lime
Roast Beef or Beef Loaf with Mushroom Gravy
Buttered Peas Mashed Potatoes
Salad of Spring Greens
Strawberry Preserves
Cream Cheese Crackers
Coffee
Tomato-Clam Juice Cocktails
Stuffed Celery
Maryland Fried Chicken
Parsleyed New Potatoes
Spoon Bread
Buttered String Beans
Raspberry Icebox Cake
Iced Tea

Breakfast is also an enjoyable meal in her household. In spite of a flexible rising hour, the table is set the night before with attractive china and flowers, and the main dish is at least partly prepared. In the morning the entire family helps get breakfast on the table. There is usually a chilled fruit juice and some other fresh fruit or berries, a choice of ready-to-serve cereals and, if the day is cool and cloudy, a hot cereal.

The main course may be eggs prepared in some attractive way, tiny codfish balls, corned beef patties with poached eggs and chilled sliced tomatoes, or fruit waffles with crisp brown baby sausages or bacon. When waffles are not chosen, she usually serves hot popovers and jam or tiny hot sweet rolls on the side.

If you like early guests, you might borrow her breakfast plan and have two or three friends join you. This is a charming idea if you expect to play golf or go on a picnic later. Of course, lots of fragrant coffee and cocoa, or a malted milk drink for the children are required.

Suggest my friend's dinner plan to your family and see how enthusiastically it will be received. Of course, every meal may not include the usual number of courses. Your Johnny may hate salads and have a passion for some most indigestible desert combination, but an occasional indulgence in his whims will not harm him and he will get worlds of fun out of it. And you can always start the meal with an unusually attractive fresh fruit cup or stuffed melon halves that will take the place of the missing salad.

If hubby scoffs at the usual desserts as being too frilly and feminine, then when his turn comes, prepare his favorite steak or roast with vegetables and terminate the meal with unsalted crackers and a tangy cheese, such as Gorgonzola or Liederkraut. MODERN WOMEN

Intimate Talks and Gestures of Young Married Set Worries a Bride

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

EXHIBITIONISTS are setting a bad example for those of us who still believe in a measure of privacy, sanctity and good manners.

The young married set are perhaps the worst offenders, for they find the freedom of a wedding ring gives a heady thrill and are very often thrown off an even keel because of it. It's usually a question of bad manners—not morals.

"My dear Mrs. Martin: at the risk of having you think me awfully narrow minded, I am going to tell you that I think the behavior of the young married set today is simply shocking. We go around with the very nicest people in town, and I am sure the very worst couldn't act less like ladies than these girls do. They not only smoke and drink, but swear worse than any man ever would dare to do in mixed company. Then, there is a marked tendency toward intimacies. All are called by their first names immediately after being presented, and on kissing terms in no time at all. I really just hate it, yet what can we do? My husband says it really doesn't mean a thing—these kissings, I mean, and calling everyone 'Jimmie, darling' or 'Betty, darling,' but it must mean something, but what? I am very much upset because we cannot very well live without these friends, and yet something is bound to happen that is going to break up the crowd. Do all young married people go on like this, or have we pitched our tent among an exceptional crowd?"

"Bride of Twenty-five."

Feel It Is Smart

Where have you been living up to now to be so unprepared for the casual deportment of the young married set and the meaningless gestures they feel it is smart to make?

Your husband is right in that it doesn't mean a thing, but he is wrong in thinking that it isn't. There are potential dangers in such situations. All one can hope for is to be good sport enough to take it on the chin, if taking it on the chin is what it is.

Try to take what consolation you can in the realization that these exhibitionists are not really serious, nor do they expect to be taken seriously. They are performing as it seems to be considered the way to perform—heaven knows why. They are only concerned with the idea of being considered sophisticated without really being sophisticated. It's senseless business, calling everyone "darling" and kissing willy-nilly, but it very often is nothing worse than silly.

It's Strictly Amateurish

One of the most worldly men of my acquaintance insists it is purely amateurish. He says that gulping down cocktails as though one never expected to have an opportunity to drink another, and getting on kissing terms with people purely for exhibition purposes is the sure mark of the amateur, and that no one who really knows anything about life would ever think of attaching any importance to such methods.

Men and women who are kissing without an audience are the ones who need watching. Those, he claims, who have any reason to conceal their attraction for each other are pretty sure to go to considerable pains to conceal it.

Granting that the whole picture you paint is in bad taste, it's not quite fair to condemn it on more serious scores. It's a mad phase through which we are passing, and who knows but it may not be less serious in its effects than some of the less spectacular phases through which we have come unscathed.

Unfortunately, one must fit in to the pattern of the society in which one lives or else remove oneself from it. I do not mean to say that every man need be "darling" to you, or that you need get on kissing terms with them, but you must learn to forbear reading meanings in these gestures and learn to accept these people as they are, or do without their society.

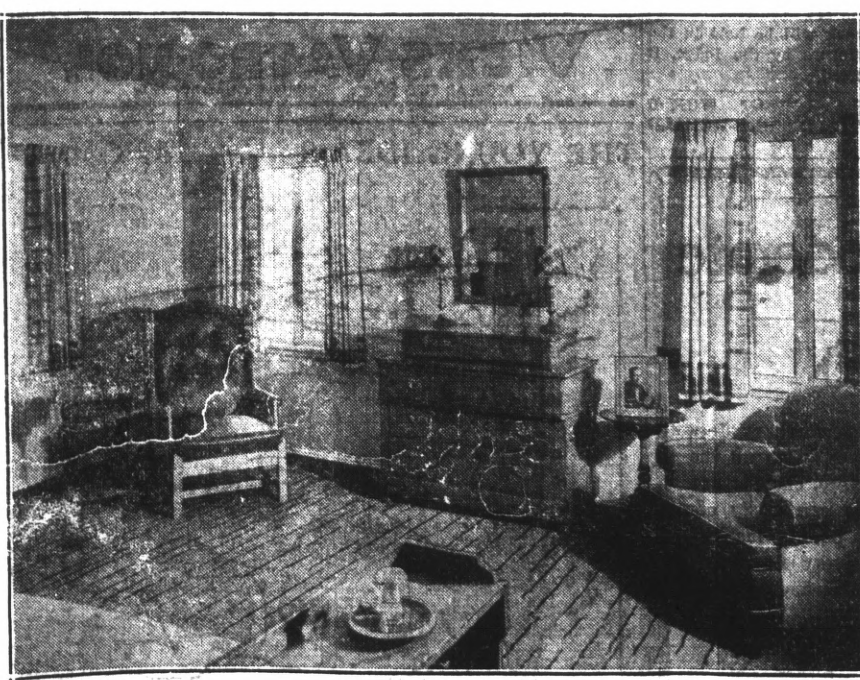

Short Cuts

To extend such foods as stewed tomatoes, apple sauce or omelet, try adding any of the flaked cereals.

With iced tea, instead of serving lemon slices serve lemon quarters. They are easier to handle.

To keep a filmy drape from sliding off the hanger, wind several rubber bands around each end.

LIGHT AND CHEERFUL

A guest room or bedroom calculated to keep the occupant in good humor. It is all in a shade of golden yellow, with an Irish arm line in the plaid curtains and lamp shades. Also green leather Cape Cod wing chair. Hand woven rug of rough texture.

BRIDGES IN ATTACK ON SHIP OWNERS

Association as Harry Bridges, local militant union leader, charged the owners had "created a situation akin to a lockout."

Bridges demanded that Federal Arbitrator Judge M. C. Sloss rule on "whether employers can usurp the functions and duties of the joint waterfront dispatching hall."

CHARGES FURLED
In a letter to Sloss, Bridges charged that "the Waterfront Employers' Association has taken over the functions of dispatching men without regard to the rules and regulations provided by the award or by the joint labor relations committee."

The award mentioned was that ending last year's disastrous maritime strike, and providing working rules.

"By what seems to be a preconcerted plan to disrupt the waterfront peace of San Francisco and to instill the situation with tension and unrest," the Waterfront Employers' Association has taken action to disrupt the method and rules of dispatching agents of longshoremen," the letter said.

PLANT IN DENIAL
Thomas G. Plant, president of the Employers' Association, denied that dispatching hall duties had been usurped. He said that longshoremen were being called back to the association rather than by individual companies "to prevent any chance of discrimination against certain companies."

Bridges announced a special meeting of local I. L. A. chapters tomorrow night "to consider the present lockout and what action should be taken on it."

ARE BLACKLISTED
Some 1,200 I. L. A. members have been blacklisted by employers for refusal to work certain cargoes. Until all cargoes and specifically cargo aboard the freighter Point Clear from Vancouver, B. C., is worked the men will not be reinstated, employers have announced.

District officials of the I. L. A. today expressed opinions that a coast-wide referendum on the question of lifting an I. L. A. embargo against British Columbia cargoes would be needed before the Point Clear could be worked. William J. Lewis, district president, said the district council was willing to submit the issue to a vote.

12 SHIPS TIED UP
Twenty-one ships were tied up today in San Francisco harbor.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGowan joined three federal conciliators here in an effort to bring peace to the threatened situation.

The conciliators announced during the day that strikers' harassment of Sacramento and San Joaquin river boats had agreed to submit to their membership the question of whether direct arbitration would be accepted in their dispute with River Lines, Inc. Twice before the union has declined to accept such arbitration.

of Ethiopia tonight as Emperor Haile Selassie prepared to throw the full force of his army into the field to meet the threat of Italian invasion already reported begun on the eastern frontier.

The King of Kings called a bitter protest to Geneva that Italian troops for a week have been on Ethiopian territory near the point where Ethiopia, Eritrea and French Somaliland join. The Italians have established a large attack base near the four-foot mountain, Mousa Ali, 18 miles inside the Ethiopian boundary.

The Italians also reportedly had 50 airplanes and a large mechanized unit ready to cut Ethiopia's only railroad outlet to the coast. The base of the mountain, which is honeycombed with caves, once used in the slave trade, was a beehive of Italian military activity.

his patience with her was exhausted, he cautioned France against joining in sanctions penalties against him; he warned Britain not to impede him.

He denounced everything but a clear war.

PROTESTS DENIED
Word from Geneva that Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia had protested "invasion" of Ethiopia by Italian troops at Mussolini, the Italian frontier, was denied by the Foreign Office. The spokesman also denied a rumor the Italians had advanced to Shawa.

The foreign office said that Italian troops in Eritrea had advanced to new and better positions, but view of the ever increasing hostile attitude of the Ethiopians.

The spokesman denied rumors circulated abroad that skirmishes had occurred between Italian outposts and Ethiopians.

WAR SEEN
But throughout D. Duce's speech, there was the implication that these things would be true and much more.

"At the League of Nations," said Mussolini, "there is talk of sanctions. I refuse to believe that the authentic people of France can associate themselves with a campaign against those who touch side by side with them and whose dead are buried together in the sacred soil of battle."

"Until there is proof of the contrary, I refuse to believe that the authentic people of Great Britain will bring all Europe into a world-wide confederation to defend a country which the whole world recognizes as barbarous, and which is unfit to associate with the civilized nations of the world."

RATTLED SABRE
Then D. Duce's voice rose to a higher pitch as he rattled his sabre for all the world to hear.

"We do not ignore the possibilities of tomorrow. We have deeply considered, and if necessary we shall respond with our spirit of sacrifice."

"To military measures we shall respond with military measures; to acts of war we shall respond with acts of war; let no one delude himself that he can break us down and make us surrender."

"We cannot be held in subjection and we never shall assume any other attitude."

"We cannot be held in subjection and we never shall assume any other attitude."

BRITAIN WORD
Mussolini reiterated in strong terms that he would do all in his power to avoid this colonial strife assuming proportions of a European conflict.

There was little doubt in the minds of his listeners that the dictator was referring to Britain, which has strengthened its Mediterranean armaments and placed the most powerful fleet in the world in position to close the Suez Canal, gateway to East Africa.

EUROPEAN WAR SEEN
"The idea of a European war may be attractive to certain minds, which hope to avenge their disgraced temples through this new catastrophe," said Mussolini. "Never as at this historic hour, have the people of Italy revealed such force of character, and it is against this people, to which mankind owes its greatest conquests, this people of heroes, of poets, of saints, of navigators, of colonizers, that the world dares threaten sanctions."

"Italy! Italy! Entirely and universally Fascist. The Italy of the Blackshirt revolution! Rise to your feet! Let the cry of your determination rise to the skies and reach the ears of soldiers in East Africa! Let it be a comfort for those about to fight."

"Let it be an encouragement to our friends, and a warning to our enemies. It is a cry of Italy which goes beyond the mountains and the sea. It is the cry of justice and of victory."

Old Glory Week Is Proclaimed
SACRAMENTO, Oct. 2.—Governor Merriam today issued a proclamation setting aside next week as "Old Glory Week" in California.

Second Arrest In Co-Ed Murder Case
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Oct. 2. — F. P. Sheriff Sam Deal charged today that statements of principals in the case of Margaret Wilma, Colorado college co-ed found dead in a shallow stream, did not coincide.

The investigation was broadened and intensified with the arrest of George Sleppy, whose home the girl had to go to her death.

Sleppy is a brother-in-law of Carl Garrett, Miss Wilma's fiancé with whom he quarreled on the night she died. Garrett was held incommunicado in the county jail.

Miss Wilma's body was found early Monday in Cheyenne Creek near the Sleppy home.

PEACE PLEA SOUNDED BY ROOSEVELT

submarines and more than 200 fighting planes went through a tactical maneuver simulating attack and defense as a unit.

Thousands of California citizens massed in the city stadium not far from the international exposition to hear Mr. Roosevelt assert that "we are moved by a stern determination to avoid those perils that will endanger our peace with the world."

FREE OF WAR
Apparently referring indirectly to persecution of Jews under the Nazi regime in Germany, the President said:

"Our national determination to keep us free of foreign wars and foreign entanglements cannot prevent us from feeling deep concern when ideals and principles that we have cherished are challenged."

"We regard it as axiomatic that every person shall enjoy the free exercise of his religion according to the dictates of his conscience."

It is true that other nations may enforce contrary rules of conscience and conduct. It is true that policies that may be pursued under their other than our own are beyond our jurisdiction.

"Yet, in our inner individual lives we never can be indifferent, and we assert for ourselves complete freedom to embrace, to profess and to observe the principles for which our flag has so long been the lofty symbol."

"I hope from the bottom of my heart," Mr. Roosevelt concluded, "that as the years go on, in every continent and in every clime, nations will follow nation in proving by deed as well as by word their adherence to the ideal of the Americans: I am a good neighbor."

The President cited the "plain facts of our present condition"—which he interpreted as proving a lifting of the depression burden in answer to criticism of his actions for recovery since taking office.
